22nd Sept to 26th Sept 2025

Organized by Dept of Sociology, Nagaland University & Research Committee 01, ISS

Funded by Nagaland University and Prof. Aparajita Gangopadhyay Memorial Fund, Indian Sociological Society

Department of Sociology, Nagaland University Lumami organized a Five-Day Academic Reading and Writing Workshop for PhD Scholars, in collaboration with RC 01, Theory and Practice in Sociology and Indian Sociological Society from 22nd Sept to 26th Sept 2025. The key resource person, for the hands on training on how to read and write texts academically, was Prof. Satish Deshpande, Former Head and Professor, Department of Sociology, Delhi School of Economics. Prof. P. S. Vivek, the Treasurer, Indian Sociological Society also attended the Workshop. Through the five day sessions, mostly based on exercises focused on training the scholars to do active, conscious reading, deconstructing and reinterpreting the academic texts of various kinds. It highlighted the significance of pre-reading, quick overview, detailed overview, close reading, quotations, paraphrasing, citation, paragraph writing, role of AI in academic research.

The key focus of the Workshop was on addressing the following goals:

The workshop aimed to arm research scholars with the necessary basic techniques of academic reading and writing in the social sciences. Beginning with an introduction to the generic structure of academic texts, it had 4 sessions per day, for five days devoted to:

- i) Techniques of reading: pre-reading, quick reading, detailed reading, dealing with difficult passages, and how to seek internal and external help.
- ii) Writing techniques: elements of coherence and structure, the distribution of emphasis, paragraphs, quotation and paraphrasing.
- iii) Formal conventions of academic texts: competency in citation and referencing, current definitions of plagiarism and how to avoid it.
- iv) Essentials of standard academic formats: research proposals, literature reviews, elements of “publishability”, negotiating stylesheets, and writing for academic journals.

During the Inaugural Session at the Conference Hall, Prof. Temjensosang, Dept. of Sociology chaired the programme and introduced the resource person to the audience and stressed the significance of such workshops for the growth of scholarship in universities. Dr. Suraj Beri, the Organizing Secretary of the workshop highlighted the core objective of the research workshop, being the skills needed to do professional reading and writing in academics. There were 32 participants across different departments and universities. Prof. J. K. Patnaik, Hon'ble VC, Nagaland University delivered a speech on the occasion. In his speech, he remarked how fortunate the participants are, to be involved in such a professional-enriching programme, and encouraged them to make the most of it. A vote of thanks was delivered by Dr. Dipika Paul.
